"The Pride of Preuss" is an extraordinary initiative that spotlights the exceptional achievements of eight senior scholars. These scholars have served as remarkable ambassadors, not only for their school but also as advocates for higher education and the values of a substance-free lifestyle. These eight scholars have ventured beyond their school, visiting multiple elementary’s to share their inspiring stories representing Preuss pride. Through their compelling narratives and accomplishments, they serve as living examples of the transformative power of education at Preuss.

"The Pride of Preuss" program, in its dedication to showcasing these scholars, plays a pivotal role in influencing future students. Taking its name from a Cajun epithet for “half-breed,” Redbone boasted members of such Native American tribes as Cherokee, Yaqui, Apache, and Shoshone. Remembered primarily as the first commercially successful American Indian rock group, the band attained brief success in the early 1970s for two bona fide pop singles, “Witch Queen of New Orleans” and “Come and Get Your Love.” The band’s albums, however, were more complex affairs, mingling topical issues—including the Wounded Knee massacre of Sioux Indians by the Seventh Cavalry in 1890 and the Native American protests on Alcatraz Island in 1969—with Native American chants and long, improvisational jams. Following the success of “Come and Get Your Love,” which became a huge dance hit, the band increasingly tilted toward dance- and disco-flavored music before disbanding in the late 1970s. Redbone was inducted into the Native American Music Association Hall of Fame in 2008, as well as the legendary New York Smithsonian Museum of the American Indian in 2013. Redbone is accredited in the Smithsonian as the first Native American rock/Cajun group to have a No. 1 single in the United States and internationally.
