celebrating hispanic/latinx heritage month!

FACT OF THE DAY:

National Hispanic Heritage Month, which begins each year on Sept. 15, celebrates U.S. Latinos, their culture and their history. Started in 1968 by Congress as Hispanic Heritage Week, it was expanded to a month in 1988. The celebration begins in the middle rather than the start of September because it coincides with national independence days in several Latin American countries: Guatemala, Honduras, El Salvador, Nicaragua and Costa Rica celebrate theirs on Sept. 15, followed by Mexico on Sept. 16, Chile on Sept. 18 and Belize on Sept 21. From 1968 until 1988, Presidents Nixon, Ford, Carter and Reagan all issued the yearly proclamations, setting aside a week to honor Hispanic Americans. In 1987, U.S. Representative Esteban E. Torres of California proposed the expanding the observance to cover its current 31-day period. Torres wanted more time so that the nation could “properly observe and coordinate events and activities to celebrate Hispanic culture and achievement.” Today, there is debate over whether the term “Hispanic” or “Latino/x” should be used to describe this ethnic group, however, in the end, it’s a patchwork of terms and identities wherever you go in the United States and is all a matter of personal preference. An important point to remember is that neither “Hispanic” nor “Latino” refer to a person’s racial identity; they only point to someone’s ancestry and origin. A person of any race can be Hispanic or Latino, a testament to the dynamic and multifaceted history of indigenous people, African slaves and European colonizers who all lived within the Spanish-speaking world.
